I. THE THREADIC AGE

"Magic was once spun by the sacred few. Now, it is studied, classified, and—if we are not careful—misunderstood."

—High Archivist Elan Tress, Aurelya Hall

In the modern Sartryx, the Tapestry of Fate remains sacred, but magic has evolved beyond its noble origins. Where once only royal-blooded Spinsters could touch threads, now thousands of students arrive yearly to study thread resonance—Threadica—in all its living forms.

Magic is no longer a birthright. It is a discipline.

But the true Preastres still sleep.

And the legacy of Warmth remains poorly understood.

II. THE FOUR HOUSES OF THE SARTRYX

House placement is not based on magic type, but on one's threadic potential: the way a student is most likely to influence fate.

House	Symbol	Domain of Influence	Known Traits
Aurelya	Mirror & Moon	Reflection, Judgement, Strategy	Sharp, aloof, brilliant under pressure
Illustra	Flame & Loom	Action, Courage, Command	Tactical, outspoken, emotionally charged
Velquinn	Veil & Feather	Curiosity, Lore, Adaptation	Cunning, observant, chaotic-neutral
Therenynox	Scale & Vine	Order, Wisdom, Balance	Dutiful, serene, future-leaders

Each house reflects a potential fate, not personality. One could be brave and still end up in Aurelya if their thread calls for subtle influence.

III. THE THREADIC DISCIPLINES

Rather than being elemental, most modern abilities are Threadic Disciplines—resonances categorized by thread type. All students manifest one dominant discipline, shaped by their soul's weave.

Discipline	Core Power	Description
Binding	Anchor	Stabilizes, locks, or stalls fate. Defensive use.
Weaving	Patterning	Creates illusions, enchantments, strategy-based fatecraft.
Unraveling	Decay	Entropy, memory erasure, thread-breaking. Rarely healing.
Augmenting	Amplify	Enhances existing fate—used in duels and support roles.
Divining	Sight	Perceives threadlines and futures. Rare, dangerous.
Burning (Legacy)	Ignite	Destroys or transforms fate. Once known as Warmth. Volatile.

Guarding (Mythic)	Seal	Preserves and protects fate. Preastres-class only.

Note: Kaabaig Threadbinds form a hybrid of Binding and Divining, but most now reside in Kaia and rarely participate in Sartryx study.

Tier	Name	Nature	Type	Notes
△	Preastres	Seal / Preserve	Mythic Legacy	Only 1 bearer per era; strongest; foundational
△	Burning (Warmth)	Transform / Ignite	Legacy Discipline	Volatile; creates new fate through destruction
∇	Binding	Anchor / Stabilize	Core Discipline	Common in law enforcement / guardians
∇	Unraveling	Erase / Decay	Core Discipline	Rare and dangerous
—	Others (Weaving, Augmenting, etc.)	Support / Strategy / Sight	Varies	Standard but powerful

IV. THE BIRTH THREADS

"One does not choose one's Birth Thread. It is whispered into the soul by the Loom itself."

—Old Weavers' Prayer

A Birth Thread is not a power, but a symbol of a soul's destined path—akin to constellations in astrology or cards in divination.

Thread Name	Meaning	Notable Bearers
Vici	"I shall conquer"	Common in leaders, often tragic
Renuvamen	"To begin again"	Daphni (only bearer on record)
Austrix	"The unbending"	Common in Illustra
Velora	"One who veils"	Favored in Velquinn and espionage lines
Seressa	"Of gentle sorrow"	Often found in pacifists, healers
Calerion	"Sun-born"	Royal Clothos line; Phoibus

Monalthein	"Watcher of the Moon"	Possibly Seraphina; unconfirmed
Ossanel	"To fall and rise"	Symbol of transformation

Some threads change at death or awaken during trauma. Others, like Daphni's, evolve mid-life.

V. ON PREASTRES

"When fate is in peril, the Sun shall rise again."

—Clothos Prophecy

Preastres is not a discipline—it is a legacy magic, gifted rarely by the Loom when the Tapestry is near collapse. The first bearer was divine. Phoibus was the 108th. A thousand years passed without a successor.

Until Seraphina Moon.

She is of Aurelya.

Moonborn.

Not of royal blood.

Not thread-compatible.

And yet the seal flared.

Her awakening has caused a theological and magical crisis. Some say it is proof fate is unraveling. Others say it means the Loom is evolving.

VI. ON WARMTH (LEGACY BURNING)

Originally feared for its power to burn through fate, Warmth was misunderstood as destructive. In truth, its earliest bearer—Daphni of Iluyto—demonstrated that Warmth could create new threads from ash.

Modern Warmth, now folded into the Burning Discipline, has lost its emotional and divine depth. It is practiced primarily by Illuytris and taught as a tool of focused ignition.

True Warmth—the kind that remakes fate—has not been seen in centuries.

VII. MAGIC TODAY: STRUCTURED CHAOS

Students now choose a Threadic Focus, akin to majoring in a discipline. There are shared courses like:

- Thread Theory
- Tactical Weaveflight
- Resonance Control

- Mythic Tapestry Studies

The most gifted are watched for signs of:

- Thread Awakening (latent power flare)
- Anomaly Resonance (unusual harmonies like Daphni's or Seraphina's)
- Corruption by Shears (unraveling of soul-thread)

VIII. KAABAIG PRESENCE

Kaabaigs are now rare, revered, and partially forgotten. Once crucial to fate-weaving, their magic does not align easily with modern classifications. It is passed through lineage or sacred bonding rites.

Their sensitivity to thread shifts and emotional resonance marks them as living instruments of the Loom.

Minnie Dimitri—a currently bonded Kaabaig—is viewed as both a comedic failure and a mythic anomaly. Scholars debate whether his presence signals the return of a forgotten age, or the last gasp of it.
